Serving the Youth of SOUTH AFRICA

...WHAT'S NEXT?...

"YOUTH" in the culture of South Africa are actually ages 15-35 or until marriage. Because of this I've often found myself working with university aged students in the youth ministry in South Africa.

During 2011 & 2012, I hosted IPFW (Indiana-Purdue Fort Wayne University) Chi Alpha mission teams to assist the local church to reach the University of Limpopo. God began to speak to me that the universities in South Africa are "ripe and ready for the harvest."

As I prepared to return to the USA for my year of fundraising, I sat down to discuss with the national leadership about my next mission term. They had heard about the outreach at the University of Limpopo and now requested that I teach their local churches throughout all of South Africa how to reach university students!

My assignment in my first mission term was to establish the National Youth Ministries (NYM). Praise God that this has been accomplished! Now I can turn my focus towards the "ministries" of the NYM. These will include reaching the university students as well as high schools. Developing Youth Bible Quiz and more resources for the youth of Africa are also among my goals when I return.

GOD IS OPENING DOORS! The harvest is ready, but the workers are few. Will you partner with me so that we can reach the "YOUTH" of South Africa?

*"Although Sarah's not limited in her effectiveness to any one demographic, she is especially impactful with young adults and students. This is a huge and obvious need in South Africa. There are nearly 3 dozen significant campuses in this amazing country with students coming from all over the continent to study there. Literally reach a University student in South Africa and you touch the African continent!

Sarah has student ministry skills and Chi Alpha history. She has an ability to relate to the student, and a strong connection and rapport with the local church in South Africa. I am very excited about her willingness to return to SA and am sure she will be effective!"
